

Bayesian predictive probability for binary outcome

- The parameter of interest is number of responses which can be translated into a response rate r .
- Bayesian design allows to predict the final response rate observed when the maximum sample size is reached, based on the initial guess on the distribution of potential response rates and the actual outcome at a given time point.